

A precise knowledge of the geology is an essential element for every successful mining project. From the exploration phase to mining, including the crucial step of development for production, a systematic exploration campaign culminating in a sound geological evaluation enables the analysis of data to determine the most suitable mining method.

Rudplan possesses in-depth know-how in analyzing exploration data and its geological group is capable of supplying cutting edge design and services based on both its extensive industry experience and through the use of advanced mining software.
